Learn all about Skunk Cabbage at March 19 nature program

GENEVA, IL — With a name like Skunk Cabbage, this is not the kind of spring wildflower most people look for — but it is one of the most fascinating botanical wonders of our woods.

Join naturalists from the Forest Preserve District of Kane County for a “Skunk Cabbage” nature program at Camp Tomo Chi-Chi Knolls. This free, family program is on Sunday, March 19, from 10-11 a.m.

On this naturalist-guided search, we’ll find skunk cabbage in bloom and learn about its unique traits. Skunk cabbage grows in wet woods, so wear shoes or boots that can get muddy!

All ages are welcome to this program.
Advance registration is required.
